

From the loud cries of supporters of Gen. Charles de Gaulle during the government's running battle with Communist strikers you would have supposed that the general's party the Rally of the French People (RPF) would win Sunday's Electoral College election hands down. But it didn't happen.

Official returns give the general only 12 per cent of the total vote. The Popular Republican Movement (MRP), middle-of-the-road group, and the Communists both leading heavily, but the people who picked up strong support from the Socialists and others, not the "big stick" followers of the general.

Which would indicate that France, while disgusted with the traitorous conduct of the Communists, was suspicious of the ability of some middle-of-the-road groups to handle the Red strike spasm in a tough fashion, still isn't ready to turn over free France to a one-man rule.

DeGaulle may be right on his casual point—that the trouble in France is not only a matter of the legislative and not enough for the executive—but the general's speeches apparently spell too much totalitarian philosophy for the French.

It may be that the final decision on recalling de Gaulle, power has been merely delayed. Currently the French government has taken a stiff and seemingly successful attitude toward the Communist strikers—and, people everywhere being pretty much alike, it is only natural that the French voter decided to hang onto a middle-of-the-road government as long as it could function at all.

Freedom of the Public's Press Would Make a Better Slogan By HAROLD E. KEENAN, Editor, Plainfield, N. J., Courier-News

Because there is a widespread misunderstanding of the slogan, "The Freedom of the Press," The Courier-News recommends that this word of that phrase be changed to:

THE FREEDOM OF THE PUBLIC'S PRESS

To many minds, "Freedom of the Press" means freedom only for the publisher to print what he feels like. And nothing else.

Nothing could be farther from the truth.

The press of this nation recognizes that it has two duties. First, to get and to print the news accurately and impartially. Second, to interpret that news fairly and honestly. (And we do that newspaper which thinks it can slant the news, its own slant, and not the public's information open to the public for any newspaper to attempt to slant news—and survive.)

Again and again, the newspapers of this nation have been impressing on the people that their (the public's) press is the last defense of common decency, common honesty and common sense. It is the bulwark, and cornerstone, of their other rights—freedom to assemble, freedom to worship, etc. Once the people have lost their free press, the other rights are lost.

Freedom automatically will vanish. Reflect for a moment about what your newspaper is. It is completely a service to its readers—informative through its news and advertising columns, instructive through its editorials, and a guardian of the alert to guard the people's rights and interests.

There is no question but that when the people want the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth—especially in an emergency—they get it more surely and more correctly from the press than from any other agency.

There are, few, an amazingly small few, persons in this country who do not read a newspaper. That circumstance alone makes the press a source of information of the greatest magnitude. Add to that fact the realization that the press is the only free, unbiased and unlicensed agency through which the truth surely finds its way to the American people.

As long as the American people preserve—and demand—their free press, they too will remain free. A free press is that right of truthful expression which permits us to say and to print what can be proved as true, and the veracity of public officials; corruption, high places, public and private; about viciousness, unfairness or oppression in our business, society, political or religious structures.

What is it all public enemies fear? What is it the crooked politician fears? What is it bigots and subversive organizers fear?

It is the American press—honest, enterprising, intelligent and brave.

That is why we hold out for—THE FREEDOM OF THE PUBLIC'S PRESS

Declares Berlin Blockade Purpose Has Backfired

Paris, Oct. 18.—(AP)—John Foster Dulles said today Russia's bid to shift the Western powers out of Berlin by invoking "starvation, disease and fear" has backfired.

The Republican party's adviser on foreign affairs told a news conference he was inspired by the high level of morale in West Berlin and West Germany resulting from the Western powers' determination to remain in Berlin.

A new ton in the morale of the people of Soviet Germany is shown by intelligence reports, according to U. S. authorities, he said.

Dulles made a three-day visit to Vienna, Berlin and Frankfurt. He said Austria showed an impressive economic recovery and a solid political situation.

Austria's only fear, he added, is that there might be a violent Communist attack.

There is no tangible evidence to support that fear," he said.

Israel Ready to Talk Peace; Fight Continues

Tel Aviv, Israel, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Israel accepted tonight a United Nations offer to arrange peace talks in Egypt on the fighting in the Negev. However, it rejected a cease fire proposal.

The foreign office said no cease fire proposal would be accepted until Israel is assured the Egyptians will behave.

In actions last night, Jewish troops stormed and captured heights dominating the road through the Negev. Palestine's southern desert. A dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Carter L. Davidson at the front said the Jews had succeeded in blasting open their supply route to the desert.

(The United Nations security council has been called into special session tomorrow morning in Paris to consider the new outbreak of fighting in the Holy Land.)

An Israeli foreign office spokesman said the United Nations had proposed a four-day truce in fighting "to settle peacefully the basic differences between the Egyptians and Israel in the Negev" and suggested peace talks in Jerusalem.

Israel, he said, is ready to meet the Egyptians any time, any place for peace discussions. A cease fire is impossible, he added, unless the United Nations can guarantee the Egyptians will not take advantage of such a truce to arm and fortify their positions.

Israel has thrown a top commander into the battle for control of the Negev desert area where reports indicated heavy casualties as Jews and Egyptians struggled fiercely.

The noon communiqué said bombing targets for the third consecutive night were the El Arish air base, the city of Gaza, which is both the seat of the new Arab government for Palestine and the Egyptian headquarters, and Egyptian troop centers at Majdal, Rafah and other points.

There were reports here, which could not be confirmed, that Arab forces were evacuating Gaza.

(34 words deleted by censor.)

U. N. observers stationed at Gaza apparently had pulled out for bases farther south. Those in Tel Aviv speculated that they might be withdrawn completely because of Israel's defiance of the cease fire order and her refusal to let the observers go to the front.

Unofficial informants said that unless the Egyptians strike back in force, the present phase of the fighting appears to be the last one. That would indicate it is true, that the Israeli forces feel they now are strong enough to hold the Negev.

The Negev was placed under Jewish control by last year's U. N. partition decision, but Count Ben-Gurion, Israel's first prime minister, recommended that it go to the Arabs instead. The Jews object to this strenuously.

Thus far, the unofficial sources here said, there has been no real Egyptian counter blow—either in the air or on the ground.

Eire Determined to Break Last Tie With Britain

London, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Eire is still determined to break her last tie with Britain, Prime Minister Eamon de Valera said today after talks with commonwealth leaders.

Prime ministers and spokesmen for the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand met yesterday to discuss the Irish plan to repeat the external relations act—only remaining legal connection of Eire to the British commonwealth. The talks were held at Prime Minister Attlee's country house.

The bill to repeal the external relations act will be introduced when the next parliament meets in mid-November, McGilligan said.

Under the act, the Eire signs the credentials of Eire's envoys to the United Nations and other international organizations in his name as a plenipotentiary.

In northern Ireland, Eire's some states close to the government said they viewed Eire's move as an attempt to pressure the British government into ending the partition of Ireland. They said that they were convinced the Eire would give up its plan to do so.

The commonwealth in northern Ireland was mentioned with Eire. Some 2,000,000 Irishmen may become citizens in Britain if Eire does sever the last tie.

When the last U. S. census was taken in 1940, only 40 percent of the total population was born in the United States.

Temperature Drops Suddenly to 32 Degrees

Old man weather took a sudden turn last night and left a little ice, a heavy frost and a seasonal record of 32 degrees recorded early this morning at the Experiment Station. High temperature for the 24-hour period was 58 degrees.

The temperature drop followed on the heels of a steady rain Saturday night that totaled 1.05 inches. The cold was general through out the state and nation.

Little Rock, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Lingering summer weather in Arkansas ended with a snap—a cold snap—over the weekend.

Temperatures, which were of the sweltering type last week, tumbled to sub-freezing levels in others this morning.

The lowest mercury reading was—as usual—at Gilbert, in Searcy county, where a minimum of 22 degrees was recorded. Other lows below freezing were 25 at Corning, 27 at Brinkley, 28 at Ozark and Jonesboro, 29 at Camden, Portland, Newport and El Dorado and 30 at Arkadelphia.

Temperature drops of 34 degrees over the weekend gave Pine Bluff and Little Rock lows of 32 and 34 respectively.

The decline in temperatures, general throughout the nation, was hastened in Arkansas by general rainstorms Saturday night. Weekend rain of 1.35 inches at Gilbert, 1.05 in Camden and 1.31 at Brinkley were reported.

The U. S. Weather Bureau at Little Rock predicted "fair and quite so cool" weather for tonight, with fair and warmer weather expected tomorrow.

Spends His Time Creating Something People Will Look Over and Promptly Forget

By HAL BOYLE
New York.—(AP)—David F. Folkes is spending his life creating something for people to look at and promptly forget.

And he's happy when they do just that. Folkes is a 36-year-old Englishman who has become one of the country's leading scenic and costume designers.

His type of work is highly important to the success of a stage play. But like most technical skills it is unappreciated by the average theatergoer. The man who buys the ticket doesn't ordinarily wonder who designed the stage sets or the clothing worn by the actors. He takes them for granted.

"And that's the way it should be," said Folkes. "When the actor goes up, the audience should be conscious of the locale, but their attention should then immediately be caught up in the action of the play."

Good scenic and costume design is only a means to an end, said the artist. It's not design if the audience is conscious of the setting for even one entire scene.

Folkes has specialized in British period design, particularly Shakespearean settings, and has won four top awards. His costumes for "Brigadoon" and "Shaw's" "The Bandwagon" twice won his Design Award which is the theaterworld's equivalent of the film world's "Oscar."

He recently did the scenery, costume and lighting for "Where's Charley," starring Ray Bolger.

Stage costuming has its special problems. "Everybody has a different shape," he said. "They all have to be designed so that on the stage they have a perfect figure for their particular role."

The most important thing about

High Court to Rule on Quick Divorces

Washington, Oct. 18.—(AP)—The supreme court agreed today to make a new ruling on how far states can go in throwing out Nevada-brand "quickie" divorces.

A case involving that issue was among some 75 petitions on which the court acted. These petitions are requests for hearings, mostly filed during the courts' summer recess. It refused hearings in most cases.

The cases to be heard will be argued before the court later. Final decisions probably are months away at the earliest.

Besides the divorce case, the cases the court announced it will hear include an important anti-trust action.

The issue in it is whether it is lawful for a big manufacturer to make contracts binding an independent dealer to sell his products exclusively.

Lower courts ruled that Standard Oil Company of California violated the anti-trust laws by making contracts under which independent filling stations agreed to buy all their gasoline from Standard.

The highest court also: Agreed to review a navy court martial of Chief Signalman Harold E. Hirschberg on charges of striking two fellow prisoners in a Japanese prison camp. Hirschberg was sentenced to 10 months imprisonment.

Refused to hear a case questioning constitutionality of the Washington (State) Joint Legislative Committee on Un-American Activities. Constitutionality of the committee and its work was questioned by the Washington (State) pension union.

The Nevada divorce case came before the high court from Connecticut courts.

This ruling was asked by Hermon P. Rice, who said Connecticut courts improperly overruled a Reno divorce granted to Herbert N. Rice. She and Rice were married in Reno, July 3, 1941, two weeks after he won a divorce from his first wife.

U. S. Seeks to Work Out Atom Energy Program

By LOUIS NEVIN
Paris, Oct. 18.—(AP)—The United States demanded today that the United Nations turn the deadlocked atomic energy program over to the five great powers and Canada for direct negotiations.

Chief U. S. Delegate Warren R. Austin told the 58-nation political committee the United Nations could go no further in its efforts to control the atom until the Soviet Union agreed to "participate in the world community on a cooperative basis."

The Berlin dispute comes up tomorrow in the security council. A new compromise plan which would take the issue out of the U. N. is reported under consideration by the six neutrals of the council.

Austin, commenting on a report drawn up by an atomic energy subcommittee declared:

"Communist states desire to live in a secret world of their own, blind which, for all we know, they may arm and prepare their people for war. We do not desire to live in such a world."

"That is the impasse in which the United Nations Atomic Energy commission finds itself. This is an impasse which can not be overcome by the Atomic Energy Commission."

Austin said the problem must be turned over to the United States, Russia, Britain, France, China and Canada for negotiations.

"It is because we so earnestly seek agreement, because we still hope for ultimate agreement, however dim the present prospects, that we strongly urge this course," Austin said.

Russia's Jacob A. Malik reported that "no fairy tales about alleged closed doors and iron curtains can show that the Soviet proposal is acceptable." Malik said Austin, by conjuring up fairy tales, "revealed the weakness of his position" and showed that the United States did not want to reach agreement on atomic controls.

Malik said the Russians had made a concession by agreeing to turn down atomic controls, but agreement was made impossible because "the Anglo-American majority" had changed its position to demand formation of a control body before banning the atom.

Austin said Russia's new proposal to outlaw atomic weapons was a maneuver which has inacceptable to "sincere men." He repeated his rejection of the proposal, which would set up an atomic control organization simultaneously with the ban.

"This so-called concession proposed by the Soviet Union is not a concession," he said. "It is simply a maneuver designed to provide for the destruction of atomic weapons in one country before-and-probably a long while before—there had been any determination of whether or not atomic weapons existed in another country."

Austin said Russia's proposal would set the whole problem back to where it was at the start.

"We have been through this debate over and over again in the atomic energy commission," he said. "It would not be possible nor reasonable to go back and start this debate all over again."

He said he realized his recommendation to remove the question from the U. N. agenda "will not doubt further increase the suspicion of the Soviet powers as to our motives." He said the U. S. is moved by a "deep concern for the kind of world the American people desire to live in—a world where individual human beings as well as independent nations, great and small, have the greatest possible liberty and freedom consistent with the liberty and freedom of others."

The United States, Austin declared, "does not intend to give up its atomic weapons except under a system of control sufficiently effective to guarantee that other nations do not have and cannot secure these weapons." He said most nations support this policy.

Russian and the three Western powers, he said, are said to be interested. Thus far, no commitments have been made.

Juan A. Bramuglia, Argentine Foreign Minister who is acting chairman of the committee for Berlin discussions, arranged to see Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei V. Vishinsky. Bramuglia still is leading the neutral nations efforts for a solution of the deadlock between Russia and the West.

Plane Burns Near Hope Airport

The Star has learned through reliable sources that an airplane from the Municipal Airport landed in a field near the airport some time last week. The plane struck a tree, burst into flames and crashed.

The only other plane, a Soviet plane, returned from its enforced adventure was the military of a Soviet plane and the Soviet plane was burned completely. Debris was found in a field near the airport.

Folkes is currently interested in American period plays and plans to design a play for the old South.

"I plan to do a play in Charles Town," he said.

But this design is not to hurry to finish.

Peace Mission Plan Defended by Truman

Miami, Fla., Oct. 18.—(AP)—President Truman said today he considered sending Chief Justice Vinson to Moscow to ask Premier Stalin to help dispel "the poisonous atmosphere of distrust" surrounding negotiations between "the Western powers and the Soviet Union."

The president, in a speech prepared for the annual American Legion convention, described as "a wicked falsehood" what he called "loose and irresponsible talk to the effect that the United States is deliberately following a course that leads to war."

"So long as I am president of the United States, there will be no chip on the shoulder of American," Mr. Truman declared.

He flew here from Washington in an avowed "non-political" role, and in his address described himself as "a delegate from the American people to the United Nations assembly."

Mr. Truman previously had said he called off the proposed Vinson mission after talking with Secretary of State Marshall. He explained Marshall thought "stupidly" handed action by the U. S. might cause misunderstanding at the United Nations assembly meeting in Paris.

Referring to the discarded plan in his speech to the legion, Mr. Truman said:

"I recently considered the sending of a special emissary to Moscow, my purpose was to ask Premier Stalin's cooperation in dispelling the poisonous atmosphere of distrust which now surrounds the negotiations between the Western powers and the Soviet Union. My emissary was to convey the seriousness and sincerity of the people of the United States in their desire for peace."

"This proposal had no relation to existing negotiations within the scope of the United Nations or the council of Foreign Ministers. Far from the people of the United States, the purpose of this mission was to improve the atmosphere in which they must take place and so help in producing fruitful and peaceful results."

"At this time I want to make it clear that I have not departed one step from my determination to utilize every opportunity to work for peace. Whenever an appropriate opportunity arises, I shall act to further the interests of peace within the framework of our relations with our allies and the works of the United Nations."

He said that the United States will spare no effort "to achieve the peace which the entire world desires."

Three Americans Killed in Germany Plane Accident

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 18.—(AP)—A C-54 Berlin airlift plane crashed today near Frankfurt, killing its three American crewmen.

The four-engine plane was on its way back from Berlin, assigned to reload food and coal for the blockaded former German capital. Wreckage was strewn for hundreds of feet after the craft crashed and exploded at Neu Isenburg.

Thus brought to 13 the number of Americans who have died trying food and supplies to Berlin over the Soviet Red blockade.

Report had no immediate impact on the crash. The plane had not reported any trouble to the control tower.

Republicans Fear Loss of Senate Control

By JACK BELL
Enroute with Dewey to Albany, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey winds up his second campaign tour today with followers expressing new fear Republicans may lose control of the Senate.

Traveling across Canada early in the day, the Republican presidential nominee was heading for his home base at Albany. He had three speeches scheduled in Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and Schenectady.

Crossing into Ontario province, Canada, from Detroit involved use of the shortest rail route from Owosso, Mich., where the nominee was today with followers, to the next to the last available for traveling campaigning.

But if the Dewey campaign camp counted its champion as safely in, it was another story in its analysis of the critical races involving control of the Senate.

The figuring was that eight states—Colorado, Kentucky, Minnesota, Montana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Wyoming and West Virginia—were in the balance. The GOP holds 40 of 48 seats.

Two weeks before the election, the best calculations of the Dewey strategists indicate they stand to lose at least five seats in the Senate. The GOP holds 40 of 48 seats.

Any such result would produce a Republican majority in the Senate, but it would mean that the Democrats would retain control of the Senate.

On the other side of the picture, the Dewey strategists think they have some chance of winning the Democratic seat being vacated in New Mexico by Senator Carl Hatch.

They have hopes of defeating Senator James Murray, Montana Democrat, but they fear the defeat Senator Edward V. Robertson in Wyoming.

Privately, Dewey's men "don't have much hope of upsetting Democratic Senator Edward C. Jenner in Colorado. They would be pleasantly surprised if B. Carroll Reece, former GOP National Chairman, wins in Tennessee. Senator John S. Cooper, probably will win re-election in Kentucky, but President Truman is expected to carry the home state of his running mate, Senator Alben Barkley.

Dewey has campaigned in all of the eight states with critical senate races except West Virginia.

There Senator Chapman Revercomb, Republican, who disagreed in the special session of Congress with Dewey over revision of the desperate battle with former Senator Matthew M. Neely, Democrat.

In Owosso, his boyhood home, Dewey spent a quiet Sunday with his family. He was at the home of his mother, Mrs. C. G. Dewey, and his wife, Mrs. C. G. Dewey. The family attended church and ate a big turkey dinner at noon.

Saturday night a homecoming crowd estimated at 30,000 persons crashed today near Frankfurt, through the streets and a folksy talk by the nominee at the high school stadium.

Rules Against Employment Office

In Hemphstead Circuit Court today Judge John H. Bush ruled in favor of petitioners and instructed the local office of the Employment Security Division to make available to employers all information concerning employees in the Hope office.

Action was brought by Jack Williamson, representative of local industries, who contended he could not get complete information he sought. The local office of the Employment Security Division said that all this information was available at the Little Rock office.

Judge Bush ruled that the Hope office handle the cases, which concerned local people and industries, and that all information should be available here. Attorneys for the Employment Security Division got notice of appeal.

Only civil cases were being heard in court today.

stake as out designs to remain in America.

I felt that Samarin was under special observation following an outbreak of the kind he had. He was studying English and had a collection of dictionaries in his school which he had neatly tied into a bundle.

When he came to pick it up, he found that the package had been broken. He looked obviously upset over the broken package, and the whole parcel so loosely tied that he flew into a rage, threw the books on the floor, shouting:

"We know that it was the work of Orlova. I was trembling. Samarin was pale as death. The director Andreienko tried to calm him. About this time, in the absence of Zoya Porokniakov who was away in the country, a Soviet official from Cuba took up temporary quarters in our apartment with his wife and child. To show her a little of New York, I walked over with the woman and her girl baby to Riverside Drive. We sat down on a bench facing the Hudson River, admiring the scenery and talking about our shopping experiences.

Suddenly I became aware of a middle-aged man sitting on the bench near us and listening. Our conversation was trivial and was not particularly interesting. The man spoke up in Russian:

"I haven't heard anything like it in a long time."

We did not respond and left shortly afterwards. But I looked him over and decided that he was a "bad" man. I thought of evil intentions. "Perhaps this man can help me," I flashed through my mind. I decided to return to the same spot the following evening.

(With time running out, as the day drew to a close, I returned to the spot on Riverside Drive where it occurred. The man was sitting on the same bench. He asked me if I was not the woman who had been talking to him earlier. When I replied in the affirmative, he told me that he had come to America from the Ukraine during the first world war.

My heart leaped. Here, I thought, was someone who spoke my language and who might understand me. But I had to be very careful. I knew that the NKVD vigilance had been increased of late. To test him, I led the conversation to such subjects as Russia's part in the war. As a protestant, in the event this man turned out to be a secret Soviet agent, I saw the prizes of our heroic fighters.

The stranger seemed sympathetic enough when we ranged over many subjects, but was torn between an urge to tell me what I might find in a trap. When he invited me to join him for a cold drink at a cafe, I hesitated. I impulsively replied: "No, no. They are watching me."

He laughed and laughingly reminded me that I was in America and asked me up to his little apartment nearby for a drink of water. I felt that the ice could not be broken that evening, and decided to leave. He invited me to come back for a Russian meal a few days later and put his name in a card. It was Dr. Alexander Kojansk.

I could not make up my mind what to do. During the preceding weeks, when I would go out in the evening for a drink of fresh air, I would sometimes sit on a bench at 29th Street and Central Park. Among the habitual strollers in the neighborhood was a man in the late forties who, after observing me on several occasions, spoke to me once.

"I know you're Russian. I've seen you here often."

With difficulty, I explained to him in broken English that I was a teacher and was due to return to Russia soon. Although he had every mark of being a native American, and was suspicious of me, our exchanges were brief. During our second encounter, he said to me:

"Russia—No good. Don't go back. Everything O. K. here."

I was clinging ever to this straw when the evening of Dr. Kojansk's dinner arrived. After all, I figured he had emigrated from Russia and had brought over a sister, as he had informed me, from the Soviet Union. He must have known of the life there. I decided to confide my plight to him.

As soon as I entered Dr. Kojansk's apartment, I burst out with my story. I asked for his advice, telling him that I loved America, that I had no one in Russia to go back to, and that my boat was scheduled to sail within a matter of days. My host was obviously astonished and unresponsive. My fright did not touch him and it was evident that he did not comprehend my distress. Shaken and crushed, I stalked out of his place.

By this time nearly all my money, which I had saved during my two years of teaching in America, had been converted to buy clothes and other articles to take with me to Russia. It was dangerous to possess dollars in the Soviet Union and also useless, where, as good as gold, they would be exchanged for food. In the course of my shopping trip, I had made $70 in cash, but that was not much. I was anxious to pile up a little more money, and I went to my room enough goods to convert the Porokniakovs and the other Soviet bonds that I was getting ready to sell for food.

The Soviet consulate held a farewell party for the departing group. My colleagues, the Samarin, were not present. This astonished me. I felt that unwittlingly the Samarin had sounded an alarm by their demonstrative absence. It was to

The Loves of Carmen

Serialization of screenplay from a novel by Prosper Merimee

THE STORY: Don Jose, young officer in a fashionable Spanish regiment, falls victim to the charms of the bewitching gypsy, Carmen. He kills his commanding officer in a sword-fight over her and is forced to flee to a mountain hide-out, where he joins the band of gypsy rogues who are Carmen's associates. Jose's last illusion is shattered when he learns that Garcia, the leader, is Carmen's husband. Riding through the mountain fastnesses, the band is attacked by uniformed constabulary. They take to cover as shooting starts.

Carmen crawled over beside Jose, her eyes shining with excitement. He reached out and pulled her closer under the protection of the rock and himself, angry because of his fear for her. "Keep down, you little fool!" "When I am killed it won't be by a soldier, Don Jose. That much I know," Carmen's tone was flip.

He turned back to the fight, and as fast as he fired Carmen re-loaded his pistols. Once she tugged at his sleeve and pointed at Garcia's back, yards away. He looked at her blankly.

Carmen was bland and wide-eyed, saying, "If Garcia got himself killed, we couldn't help that, could we?" "I hate him. But I shoot no more in the back," Carmen was first amazed, then angrily scornful. "You're a weakling," she said. "Always afraid of being dishonorable. You are like the dwarf who believed himself tall because he could spit so far."

Jose ignored her. She went back to loading the guns, sulky, pouting. A shout went up from the constabulary. "The sergeant's been killed." The information was relayed, disastrously. The soldiers began to withdraw as best they could and Garcia called to his men to get out fast. They ran to the horses. Carmen at Don Jose's side.

Only Remondado could not run. He lay against a rock, wounded and helpless. He tried to rise but his legs would not support him. Don Jose knelt at his side. "Wait here," he said. "I'll bring your mule to you."

Garcia stopped him, glancing with annoyance at Remondado. "Let's go, Jose," Garcia commanded. "You don't understand. Remondado isn't dead—he's only hurt."

Garcia's expression changed. "He's still alive! I didn't know that. He came over beside Remondado, then back to Remondado and his expression changed to sick incredulity when he saw Carmen crouched fully, deliberately removing the brace of children Remondado had been holding in his arms. There was nothing to do but go with the others."

The bandits Don Jose as much one of them now as any of the others, moved around the fire in a temporary hiding place. Great jagged rocks stood on either side of the fire and the men around it, public property, counted his share of the loot—money which Garcia had just portioned out to him. Dances were quickly celebrated in his habitual game of solitaire. Don Jose sat apart, looking on a "lance" of said leader with a faint, Carmen's voice was heard in the darkness, singing a gay, chorale gypsy tune.

Garcia handed Dances his share of the money and walked over to Don Jose. "That girl is crazy, taking a bath in that ice water! Listen to her. Then he paused, squinting down at Don Jose who looked off in the direction of the voice, a closed, haunted look on his face. Garcia spoke again, this time in a soft, insinuating way. "I didn't say look at her—I said listen to her."

Startled out of his reverie, Don Jose turned on the big man furiously. "I can't see her from here." "You can see her in your imagination," Garcia taunted him. "And that is what you are doing, staring her in your mind. I can tell from your face."

Don Jose cut savagely at the leader in his hand. Garcia laughed and offered the bundle of money, saying in mock sympathy, "I'm afraid you will have to be content with just sharing my money with me, Navarro." Don Jose looked up at him, his eyes sick with loathing and contempt. "I have no wish to share anything with you, Garcia." He went back to his work. "Keep your dirty money!" Garcia straightened slowly and stuffed the money into his pocket, grunting, "He doesn't want my money. Just what did you have in mind, Navarro, that you do want in payment for the work you do here? Is there anything more that belongs to me that you were thinking about?"

Jose replied in a voice biting with insult, "Anything that belongs to you would be as dirty and evil as you are, Garcia. No one would want it." Garcia exploded with loud laughter. "I'll tell her, man! I'll tell her!" He shouted as he walked away. "I'll tell her!" Half way to the fire he turned and said, still hugely amused, "But watch yourself, Jose! Probably Carlos, but you white liver and serve it to me for breakfast."

"Are you such a coward you have to get a woman to go your carving for you, Garcia?" Don Jose thung at him.

The Doctor Says:

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.
Written for NEA Service

Angina pectoris, which means pain in the chest, is generally caused by hardening of the arteries which supply blood to the heart muscle. These blood vessels are called the coronary arteries. When the passageway through these arteries has been seriously narrowed and not enough blood passes through them, the needs of the heart muscle are not satisfied and this causes pain.

This pain is not usually present when the patient is resting. It is usually brought on for the first time when the heart is pumping rapidly as happens when exercising. During such periods of extra work, the heart needs larger quantities of blood than it does when at rest. A person who has angina pectoris must, therefore, learn how much exercise can be taken without producing symptoms. In addition to the pain, the symptoms often include a feeling of anxiety, shortness of breath, and cold clammy sweating.

Learn to Live With It
Patients with angina when they learn how to live with their hearts have little or no discomfort and are not cut off from most of life's pleasures. Indeed, the outlook for patients with angina is not so pessimistic as was formerly believed. Some live for more than 25 years after the onset of their first symptoms, and the average is probably between eight and 10 years.

In addition to the better outlook, which is now recognized, the secretary of the club, Mrs. Luther Westfall, was showered with gifts for giving 100 per cent attendance to the club for the last several years.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. W. H. Spring, November 10. New officers will be elected. Everyone is urged to be present.

High Court Upholds Death Sentence
Little Rock, Oct. 18 — (AP) — A death sentence imposed for rape was affirmed today by the Arkansas Supreme Court.

The appellant, Mizell Palmer, Negro, was convicted in Pulaski Circuit Court of raping a white woman on a country road south of Little Rock the night of Oct. 19, 1947.

Justice R. W. Robins dissented to the majority opinion, written by Justice Ed McFaddin. Palmer charged in his appeal that the evidence at his trial was insufficient to support the verdict against him and that a confession he made was obtained by force.

The high court said it found nothing to sustain either of these contentions. It also rejected a contention that Palmer's sentence should have been reduced to life imprisonment because a co-defendant, Charles Hamm, received such a sentence.

The court said it had no information as to what prompted the lesser sentence in the case of Hamm but commented that the trial jury acted within its province in fixing the sentence.

Palmer and Hamm were convicted of abducting a young couple while the man attempted to repair an automobile tire. Each was charged with raping the girl while the other held the man at pistol point.

In his dissent, Justice Robins said: "In my opinion a material portion of the evidence in this case—all that part pertaining to the alleged oral confession made to the officers—was inadmissible."

"The confession was obtained through a violation of the appellant's rights... under the due process clauses of the state and federal constitutions. Therefore, it ought not to have been received in evidence."

"Courts should see to it that every accused person receives in full measure the protection that our federal and state constitutions as well as our statutes provide for him; and neither heinousness of the crime with which he is charged nor apparent obviousness of his guilt ought ever to swerve us from this high duty."

The court disposed of appeal of Henry Stevens, as trustee, against the management of angina pectoris has also improved. The amount and nature of exercise which can be tolerated can be more closely calculated. Also, there are several drugs which when given properly will usually help the victim of angina even though they do not cure the underlying cause which lies in the coronary arteries. The symptoms of angina certainly cannot be ignored, but when they do develop, it does not mean that life is almost over or that all pleasures are done with forever.

QUESTION: Is there any test which can be used to decide whether a person can drink without becoming an alcoholic?

Answer: Unfortunately the answer is no. A sizable proportion of those who start as moderate drinkers later become real alcoholics for reasons which are not yet entirely understood.

Editor F. Kaiser, vice president and general manager, said that the new Frazer sedans joined Kaiser models on Willow Run production line Sept. 14, and that K-F's output of 1949 models is now over the 600-a-day mark.

Restyled throughout, the Frazer sedans incorporate extensive mechanical changes which include a 12 per cent boost in horsepower with no accompanying increase in fuel consumption.

The power increase was accomplished with the adaptation of dual carburetor which provides most efficient distribution of fuel to all cylinders. A compression ratio of 7.3:1, highest among standard mass-produced automobiles, has been maintained in the six-cylinder engine to produce maximum economy and performance.

Style-wise, the Frazer series is distinguished by longer skirted body panels, a new honeycomb grille, wide chrome trim along the base of the body, and the addition of chrome "crease molding" which extends the length of the car below the window openings.

In interior design, the Frazer and the Manhattan represent a new approach to fabric and color styling, featuring 57 varieties of body colors and harmonizing line-quality upholstery fabrics.

Mr. Kaiser said the Frazer models, which were designed as a part of K-F's $10,000,000 new model program for 1949, embody "more custom styling features than any other mass-produced American automobile."

Among other features, automatic overdrive, which cuts engine revolutions 35 per cent at speeds over 25 miles per hour with corresponding savings in fuel consumption, is available on all models, and power-operated window controls are available on the Manhattan.

A total of 153 design changes, many of them disclosed with earlier introduction of '49 Kaiser models, are involved in the body styling, chassis and engine of the Frazer models.

Mercury Skids Over Most of the U. S.

Chicago, Oct. 18 — (AP) — The mercury skidded to new seasonal lows today at many midwestern points as the premature winter blast shoved on eastward toward the Atlantic coast.

Temperatures well below freezing were reported as far south as Nashville, Tenn., and Northern Texas, but a sudden reversal had sent the mercury climbing in the northern plains states.

Nashville had a low of 29 degrees while Minneapolis, Minn., at the same time reported 35, and Bismarck, N. D., 29. Snow fell at several points along the shores of Lake Michigan and Lake Erie.

Snow piled to depth of an inch and a half within an hour at Mt. Summit, Pa.

The warmer weather in Minnesota and the Dakotas was expected to spread out over the entire plains area today and as far eastward as Chicago with temperatures climbing back to near normals.

The minimum of 23 degrees at Chicago was the lowest for the date in 100 years in the season since 1889.

Other low readings in the mid-west included: Springfield, Ill., 24; Chattanooga, Tenn., 33; Memphis, Tenn., 35; Dallas, Tex., 36; Kansas City, Mo., 31; Amarillo, Tex., 37; Dallas, Tex., 39; Kansas City, Mo., 32.

Several points in northern and central Louisiana had lows in the 30s.

High Court Upholds Death Sentence
Little Rock, Oct. 18 — (AP) — A death sentence imposed for rape was affirmed today by the Arkansas Supreme Court.

The appellant, Mizell Palmer, Negro, was convicted in Pulaski Circuit Court of raping a white woman on a country road south of Little Rock the night of Oct. 19, 1947.

Justice R. W. Robins dissented to the majority opinion, written by Justice Ed McFaddin. Palmer charged in his appeal that the evidence at his trial was insufficient to support the verdict against him and that a confession he made was obtained by force.

The high court said it found nothing to sustain either of these contentions. It also rejected a contention that Palmer's sentence should have been reduced to life imprisonment because a co-defendant, Charles Hamm, received such a sentence.

The court said it had no information as to what prompted the lesser sentence in the case of Hamm but commented that the trial jury acted within its province in fixing the sentence.

Palmer and Hamm were convicted of abducting a young couple while the man attempted to repair an automobile tire. Each was charged with raping the girl while the other held the man at pistol point.

In his dissent, Justice Robins said: "In my opinion a material portion of the evidence in this case—all that part pertaining to the alleged oral confession made to the officers—was inadmissible."

"The confession was obtained through a violation of the appellant's rights... under the due process clauses of the state and federal constitutions. Therefore, it ought not to have been received in evidence."

"Courts should see to it that every accused person receives in full measure the protection that our federal and state constitutions as well as our statutes provide for him; and neither heinousness of the crime with which he is charged nor apparent obviousness of his guilt ought ever to swerve us from this high duty."

The court disposed of appeal of Henry Stevens, as trustee, against the management of angina pectoris has also improved. The amount and nature of exercise which can be tolerated can be more closely calculated. Also, there are several drugs which when given properly will usually help the victim of angina even though they do not cure the underlying cause which lies in the coronary arteries. The symptoms of angina certainly cannot be ignored, but when they do develop, it does not mean that life is almost over or that all pleasures are done with forever.

Dear Miss Dix: I am 24 years old. Live at home and help on financially, since my father is an invalid. I don't mind helping the family at all. In fact, I am proud to be in a position to do so, but I think that a girl of my age should be allowed a little freedom. I work six days a week and on Sunday afternoons I would like to go to a movie, but when I ask my mother to go with me she refuses, and I go without her. She sends me brother to see where I go and with whom, and she accuses me of meeting strange men which, of course, I never do.

The company I work for gives dances quite often, but I have never been permitted to attend one of them. I never even have been allowed to go to the weddings or showers of my girl friends. I am expected to come straight home from work and never leave until I go to work the next day.

It isn't that I want to run around. I just want a little of the same freedom that girls of my age are entitled to. Please tell me something to do, for I can't stand many more of the week ends that I have had for the past four years, and it gets worse all the time.

Answer: I think you are very foolish and weak to submit to your parents' tyranny, and that you should read that riot act to them and make them fully understand that unless they leave you free to come and go as you please, you will leave and go somewhere to live where you can, at least, have a little personal liberty.

It isn't as if you were a little bobby-soxer who was too young and ignorant of the world to be able to look out for yourself. You are 24 years old. That is maturity for a woman, and if she is ever going to have any sense and discretion, she has it. You have shown that you are capable of taking care of yourself by not only looking after your own interests, but by helping to support your parents, and that certainly entitles you to emancipation.

A girl has to make her way while the sun of her youth and good looks shine. If she doesn't do it before she is 30, she is apt to have a very hard time.

U. S. Plane Shaken by Blast

By DONALD DOANE

Berlin, Oct. 18 —(AP)—A United States C-54 transport plane supplying blockaded Berlin was shaken by a mysterious explosion today shortly after taking off from Berlin's Gatow airport.

Lt. Raymond Miller of the 1256th Air Transport Squadron, the pilot, said the plane was shaken severely, but not from anti-aircraft fire. It was flying at 1,700 feet. American and British officials said a dynamite blast might have been the cause.

"I heard an explosion two minutes after my takeoff, the concussion from which severely shook my aircraft," Miller's written report said. "I immediately looked out the window and saw a large cloud of smoke coming from a small patch of woods. I observed no actual fire or explosions in the area."

U. S. and British officials, however, said they believed the plane was jolted by the concussion from a ground explosion which occurred so near Gatow airfield that it rattled windows.

There was no indication, these officials said, that anti-aircraft guns were fired.

The Russians gave no warnings of gun practice today in the air corridor used by British and American planes supplying blockaded Berlin.

They did impose a sharp traffic inspection at occupation sector borders within the city, aimed at tightening the blockade.

The Soviet authorities were asked for an explanation for the explosion. However, no explanation had been received.

Lt. Col. Beverly Steadman, senior U. S. air officer in Berlin, said "there is no indication the blast was caused by anti-aircraft fire."

"The fact that the ground explosion occurred simultaneously (with the C-54 takeoff) leads us to believe that what the pilot felt was that explosion," he said.

Steadman said he had no knowledge of a published report that an American fighter plane had been altered to fly at heights by Russian and unidentified planes over the U. S. zone of Germany.

Polk Killed by a Top Communist

By JUDSON O'QUINN

Salonika, Greece, Oct. 18 —(AP)—The Greek government says a top Communist killed George Polk, correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System, last May.

Topping off a five-month investigation of the slaying, the government yesterday named three others charged with complicity in the murder. Two of them are under arrest.

One of the persons under arrest was quoted as believing the murder was planned by the Communist International Information Bureau to discredit the Greek government abroad.

The government said the actual shooting of Polk was done by Adam Mouzenides, member of the central committee of the Greek Communist party. He was alleged to have shot the correspondent in the back of the head as Polk lay blindfolded and trussed in a boat in Salonika bay last May 3.

The other three charged with complicity in the murder were Evangelos Vasvanas, still at large; Gregory Staktopoulos, Communist newspaperman, and his mother, Anna, both under arrest for the past two months.

All four face charges of conspiracy to murder Polk. Mouzenides and Vasvanas also were charged with illegal possession of firearms and carrying arms, punishable by death under present Greek military law.

The story of the murder, as told by the official announcement, was as follows:

Polk, 34-year-old war veteran from Fort Worth, Tex., had expressed a desire to interview Markos Vafiades, Communist leader of the Greek rebels.

Staktopoulos was assigned by the Communists as the "contact" man to lure Polk to a boat in Salonika bay on the pretext he was being taken to see Markos.

Polk got into the boat with the three men. His feet and hands were tied and he was blindfolded, apparently being told he was not to see the route taken or the interview.

Mouzenides shot Polk. He took Polk's identity card and a calendar from the dead man's pocket and gave them to Staktopoulos, who said he had not been told the murder had been planned.

The body was thrown into the water. It was not found until May 6.

Staktopoulos had his mother mail Polk's identity card to police May 11. Police found the handwriting on the envelope was that of the mother. After intensive questioning Staktopoulos confessed.

Walter Lippmann, chairman of the writers' committee, which engaged Gen. William J. Donovan, former head of the U. S. Office of Strategic Services, to investigate Polk's slaying, said after a $10,000 reward was paid after the Greek government announced the slaying, the group is "becoming an entirely open mind" on the case.

Educator Doubts Russia Will Force Important Issue If Allies Seriously Object

By DeWITT MacKENZIE

AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, in discussing the European crisis says he doubts if the Soviets will force the issue provided Britain, France and America are firm in holding just positions.

Dr. Conant expresses this view in his new book, "Education in the Divided World." He says he is convinced that there is little or no analogy between the Nazi menace and the Soviet challenge, and continues:

"The former, to my view, had to be met by force of arms because it was an immediate military threat. The latter is an ideological and political thrust supported by military means; the Russian armies hidden behind the iron curtain are defensive troops to support political gains by the advanced fifth column with another nation; they are not to be used as the spearhead of the forward movement."

"I recognize I am being very dogmatic about a highly debatable subject. Not only will many experts on foreign affairs disagree with this diagnosis, but history may prove me wrong within the next few months."

However, I am bold enough to predict that, unlike Hitler, Russia will not take aggressive military action by invading a nation without an invitation from a de facto government. I make this prediction in July, 1948, in spite of the gravity of the situation in Berlin.

Recurring periods of extreme tension would seem inevitable consequences of an armed truce. If Great Britain, France, and the United States are firm in their determination to hold positions recognized as just as world opinion, I doubt if the Soviets will force the issue.

"The proper pattern for preventing the outbreak of another global war would seem to involve readiness to answer coercion by the use of force coupled with willingness to negotiate at any time on matters of broad policy."

I doubt if many foreign affairs experts in the democracies will do other than agree with Dr. Conant. For that matter, probably many Soviet observers will concur in their own hearts, even if they don't see fit to say so.

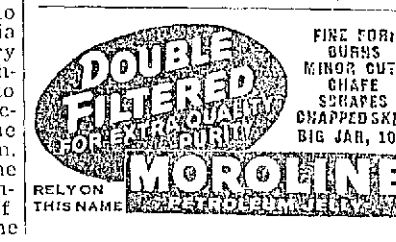

The consensus of objective observers is that the Soviets don't want war—at least not now. It's clear that the Communists intend to push their offensive to the limit—short of precipitating war. Therefore if war should develop out of the present situation it would be by accident, so to speak, rather than by premeditation.

However, there is one remote contingency which strikes me as almost certain to produce another armed upheaval. That is a sweeping Moscow success in communizing all Western Europe and the Far East. Should such a tragedy happen there is small doubt that "capitalistic America"—bete noir of the Reds—would be attacked, in order to complete their conquest.

That, of course, is crossing a lot of bridges which we aren't likely to be called upon to cross. The recent hardening of the policy of the Western powers certainly fits in with Dr. Conant's "pattern for preventing another global war." They recognize that the way to stop a bully is to stand up to him. They have no intention of letting the Bolsheviks continue expansion by aggression, although they are willing to negotiate any legitimate problem with Moscow.

304 Persons in Arkansas Die in Auto Wrecks

By The Associated Press

Three hundred and four persons have been killed in highway accidents in Arkansas so far this year.

Four persons met violent deaths in the state over the week end. Two died in highway mishaps yesterday (Sunday).

A head-on collision of two automobiles near Mt. Ida, Ark., caused the death of George V. Morris, 41, Granite, Okla. His wife and two companions were seriously injured.

Near Pocahtoc, Ark., a traffic accident involving two automobiles and a truck resulted in the death of Julian Mook, 24, Biggers, Ark., and injury of ten others.

William Luther Frazier, 43, and Nolan Gilliam, farmers of Heth, Ark., were electrocuted near West Memphis, Ark., Saturday when they came in contact with high tension wires after a minor traffic accident. The two men touched a dangling power wire after they stepped from their car. The auto had struck a parked truck and then cranked into a power line pole.

The summit of Mt. Washington in New Hampshire is 6,293 feet above sea level.
